Note: The most recent version of Photoshop available at the time this book went to press is Photoshop CS 6. This version, as well as many tutorials, is Windows-only. A Mac version of Photoshop is planned for the next update of the software. ## Figure 1-1: The basic Photoshop workspace After installation, you can start Photoshop by pressing Windows key + N and selecting Photoshop from the list of applications displayed. Figure 1-1 shows a typical beginner's workflow. Photoshop can be used in a variety of different ways. Its interface provides a basic workspace and controls for editing and creating images. However, you have access to many more features and tools through its menus and tool palettes. These tools are described and explained in the following sections. Note that most topics in this book focus on the beginner's workflow. We show the beginner on the left of Figure 1-1 as a sort of inverted triangle with a tip of a larger triangle pointing down toward the right side of the graph. This symbolizes the content of this book. You can find a number of articles on a variety of topics by the end of this book. Some are quite advanced, and many contain little or no basic beginner information, but they do relate to advanced topics.

Movie: Different types of implants are used to replace parts of a human body, for example due to cancer, accidental injuries, or congenital defects. Such implants can be used as artificial joints for replacing diseased or damaged natural joints, such as in the human knee or hips. They can also be used for facial reconstruction, spinal reconstruction, and other reconstruction, including corneal reconstruction. It is customary for implants to include bone or other hard tissue material (e.g., ceramics) on the exterior of the implant to be in contact with a surface in the body (e.g., bone) into which the implant is inserted. Exemplary types of implants include those known as total knee replacements (“TKRs”), unicondylar knee replacements (“UKR”), and unicompartamental knee replacements (“UKR”). It is known to secure the implant to the bone by press-fitting or by cementing. Articular surfaces of implants are typically prepared to be orthogonal or parallel to the implant's mechanical axis. In particular, the articular surfaces are often prepared to be perpendicular to the mechanical axis of the femur or tibia into which the implant is inserted. However, in natural joints such as the human knee, the articular surfaces of natural femoral condyles and tibial eminences are not always perpendicular or parallel to the mechanical axis. In the absence of parallel or orthogonal articular surfaces, the contact area between the articular surface of an implant and the proximal or distal femur or tibia is less than the contact area in a natural joint. Additionally, improper articulation often leads to further post-operative functional problems. Consequently, there

---

---

---

Q: Test if list contains certain value and return index of it I would like to be able to do something like class

Object(object): def
__init__(self, someValue):
self.value = someValue class
Tester(object): def
__init__(self, listOfObjects):
```

---

```
self.listOfObjects =
listOfObjects def doesListContain(self, searchValue): self.listOfObject
s.indexOf(searchValue) data
= [Object(1), Object(2),
Object(3), Object(3),
Object(4), Object(5),
Object(5)] tester =
Tester(data)
tester.doesListContain(4)
#return 0
tester.doesListContain(1)
#return 4
tester.doesListContain(5)
#return 8 A: I don't know

what you consider efficient, but this is the best that comes to mind:

def contains(self, search_value):
    for obj in self.listOfObjects:
        if obj.value == search_value:
            return obj
    return False

This takes linear time in the length of the list, as opposed to  $O(n)$ , which is the other solution that comes to mind.
